User story

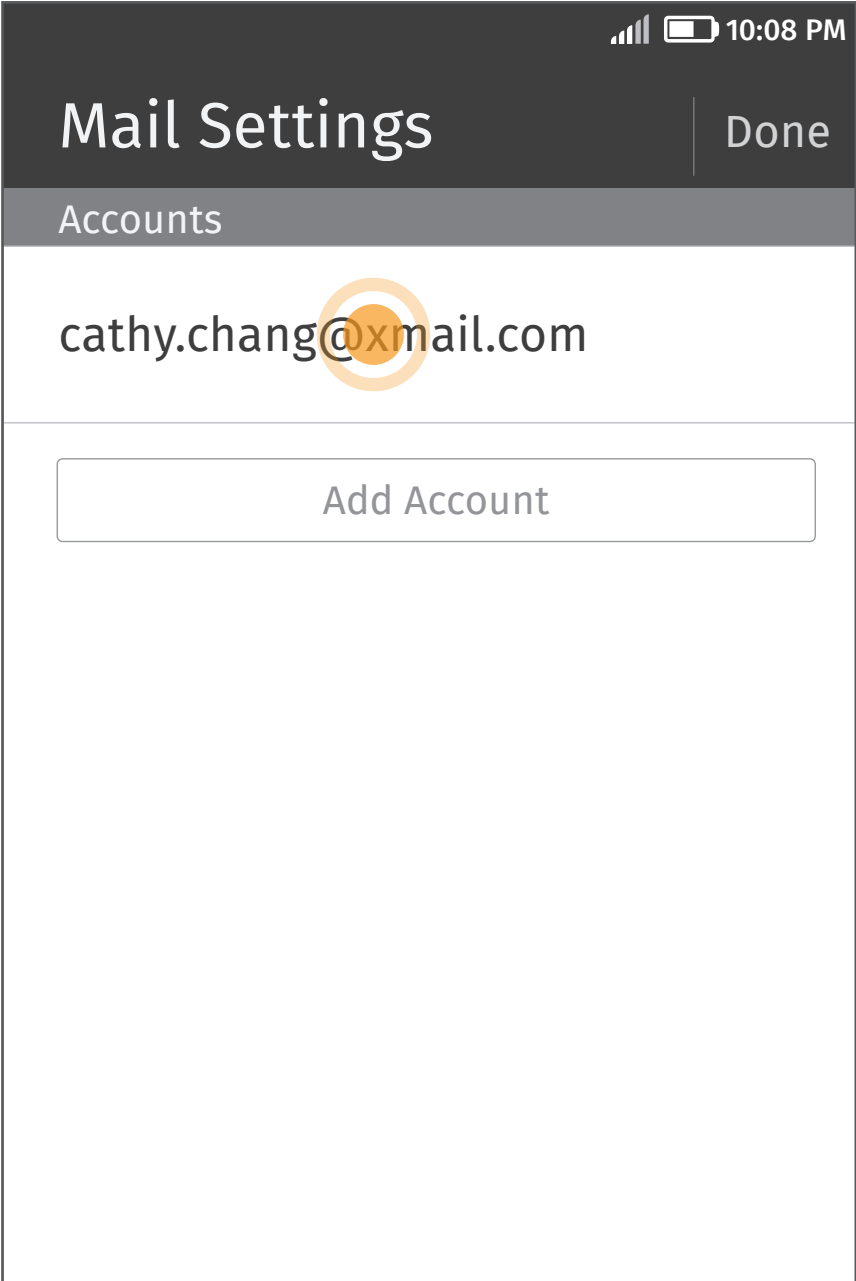

Bug #847168

As a user, I want to be able to create an email signature with a default set to “Sent using Firefox OS” such that I can save time by not typing my signature for every email and I can show off my use of Firefox OS.

Notes: Perhaps during account creation process ask the user if they actually want to use a signature. Scoping includes additional unit test coverage involving signatures.

Signature appears in gray in the body of the email. If user taps the field, the cursor will be placed in front of it. The signature is editable. Changing it in this view is one-time only. That is, it does not change the signature in Settings or in any consecutive emails.
